Scott Tennant is a founding member of the Grammy-winning ensemble L.A. Guitar Quartet, which is composed entirely of USC alumni, and is himself considered to be one of the world's top classical guitarists. During his student years at USC (1980-1986), he studied with Pepe Romero, James Smith and was a chosen performer in the USC Segovia Masterclasses of 1981 and 1986. He has authored several books and articles on guitar technique, including the best-seller Pumping Nylon, which has attained a "cult" classic status. It has become a standard text in conservatory and university guitar programs around the world.
